THE LAST OF "FUNK."

CHICAGO'S INSANE BOOK THIEF DESTROYS HIMSELF.

His Attempt to Enter Carnegie Library - He Begins by Robbing the Library of Valuable Works - Fish and Ward - Criminal Notes.

October 27. - Six weeks ago a well-known man of 27 years, who gave his name as J. A. Talbot and his residence as Chicago, applied for admission into the Carnegie library of Harvard university. He passed the examination and was admitted, but soon afterward the college authorities discovered that the dates of his numerous letters of recommendation had been altered, and that he had been arrested on a charge of larceny for the larceny of an overcoat, and Friday morning was found dead in his cell at the Cambridge police station, an evident suicide. Drowning in the lake, a bit of paper, on which was printed:

Mr. Talbot: Will you please send my trunk to my sister, Bertha Talbot, at 123 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill. Tell her what has happened.

Investigation at the college's boarding-house and elsewhere, proved him to be no other than the noted "Old Funk," alias J. A. Talbot, alias O. B. Boehme, who last spring dug a trench in the college yard for the purpose of burying the bodies of the students who had been killed in the war.

A memorandum found in the trunk showed that the many books that have recently been missing from the Harvard library. Guided by these notes the officers discovered in the woods behind the Agassiz museum two boxes containing a large quantity of books, a trunk with 75 books, two sets of surgical instruments and other articles. All these things, it now appears, were Talbot's work.

SYMPATHY FOR FISH.

Affecting Scene in a Railway Station - About Ward's Willing.

New York, Oct. 31. - James D. Fish was taken to Auburn on the train which left the Grand Central depot at 10:30 a. m. Friday. He passed a sleepless night in his room at the Murray Hill hotel. The scene at the depot when he was taken away was affecting. Father and child were in tears. "Good bye, child," said the old man, "be brave for my sake." The young lady was too deeply affected to reply. The crowd of friends who looked on with sad faces before looked disinterestedly at the aged prisoner, seemed to relent. "It is hard for such an old man to go to jail," said one, and there were various other expressions of sympathy. The district attorney hurried Fish aboard the car. Before the train left Fish said to a reporter: "I am satisfied to go back to Auburn, for I know that within a few days I will be free. I have been credited to me. I never took a penny of any one's money, and whoever says so is a falsehood. I made several mistakes, and that was all."

Mr. Fish was quite free in his comments upon Ward. He hoped his chief, the district attorney, would move a suspension of Ward's sentence, and secure his conviction on several more indictments, so that his term of imprisonment could be lengthened. Among the many things for which Ward could be punished were his sale of liquor of a mine which he did not own, and his perjury for unlawful purposes, while he was a director of the institution. Mr. Fish declared that Fish was a scoundrel. He never robbed any one but himself, but on the contrary, gave up a fortune to protect the bank. Mr. Fish also intimated that an effort to secure Fish's pardon would be made in about a year, after his evidence had been obtained in all the suits growing out of the Grant and Ward matter.

The statements to the effect that proof exists of Ward's having invested from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 of his ill-gotten gains in England were not denied by the district attorney. He, however, spoke of the growth of the fact that this line of inquiry had become public. A gentleman familiar with Ward's affairs cast doubt upon the accuracy of the English newspaper stories. "They are based," he declared, "on the fact that just previous to the failure Ward sold sterling at sixty days short, to the amount of $1,500,000, a transaction that Ward was covering up."

The publication of the fact that suit had been brought by the receiver of Grant and Ward against certain banking institutions and funds under the surety laws to recover the excessive interest paid for loans from such institutions to Grant and Ward, caused some uneasiness in financial circles, which was allayed, however, by the publication of correspondence between one of the principal banks referred to, the Lincoln National and Receiver Johnston. By this correspondence it is shown that the amount received by that bank was 8 percent discount on $1,000,000, equal to $20,000, and amount charged to be received by the receiver is twice this sum. Such small affairs are not likely to create much of a sensation.

In an interview Friday evening, District Attorney Martine stated that Ward would be sentenced on the present verdict, and that the other indictments pending against him would probably not be pushed to trial.

Dakota Has a New Experience.
GRAND JURORS, D. T., Oct. 31. - George Miller was hanged at 1:30 Friday afternoon, being the first legal execution in North Dakota. On the 31st of January last the wife and 11-year-old son of Rev. C. H. Snell, a Methodist minister, living six miles from Minn., were murdered by Miller, employed by Snell to work his farm. The crime was not discovered until a week later. Mr. Snell being absent at Minneapolis holding a revival meeting. The meantime the minister made good his escape. Mrs. Snell had been struck on the head with an ax and then her throat cut. The boy was killed with a blow from the ax. Suspicion fastened on Miller from the first, and he was traced and arrested at Minn., on Nov. 3. He at once confessed the crime, and later made another confession, implicating a mail carrier. The latter is now awaiting trial for complicity, but no evidence additional to Miller's confession has been secured.

Burns, the Chicago Murderer.
CHICAGO, Oct. 31. - Lillian Wallace and Mrs. Ray Cook, the victims of Wednesday's attack in front of R. G. Dunn's agency, are kept in seclusion at the County hospital and nobody is allowed to see them except their immediate relatives. The physicians say the prospects for the recovery of both the young women are very favorable, especially in the case of Mrs. Cook, who at first was supposed to be the most severely wounded. Burns was before Justice Meacham Friday morning, a preliminary hearing. Burns was as cool and self-possessed as he has been ever since the shooting, and refused, as usual, to say anything about his crime. The case was continued to Friday, Nov. 6, and the prisoner was removed without trial.

Another Cowardly Murderer.
WATKINS, Wis., Oct. 31. - Friday evening James Young was shot in the boarding house of the McDonald Lumber company, kept by his divorced wife. After gaining admittance Young shot her in the head and neck, from the effects of which she soon died. Deceased obtained a divorce last month for drunkenness and failure to support. Threats of lynching Young and Carl Skidde who is indicted for the murder. Among the witnesses called by the grand jury Friday was one against Joseph Pean, a capitalist and prominent church member. This city, for parjurer, and one against William P. Launier, judge of the East St. Louis city court, also for perjury. Pean's offense is based on undervaluing his property to the assessor, and Launier's on improperly scheduling his property against an executor.

You'll Do for a Mail Clerk.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 31. - Formal charges have been forwarded to Postmaster General Vicks against Councilman Downing by the supervisors. Downing is in the railway service, and several months ago declared that he had bribed six Republican members of the city council. The charges are backed by affidavits and court records. The ground is taken that a man who is guilty of bribery is not fit to handle mail.

Mary Kienka Confesses Her Crime.
DUBUQUE, Iowa, Oct. 31. - The fact that Miss Mary Kienka, recently sentenced to a brief period to the Joliet Penitentiary, has written a letter to a friend in this city confessing the crime of poisoning her brother, sister, father and mother, has created a sensation among her relatives. She seems to be pleased because of her short sentence.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE FUNERAL.

No Military Display at the Burial of McClellan - The Pull-Bearers.

New York, Oct. 31. - The funeral of the late Gen. McClellan will take place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock from the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church. In accordance with the request of Mrs. McClellan there will be no military demonstration, though all veterans who served under the general have been invited to attend the funeral. A simple service of the dead will be conducted, and no eulogy will be pronounced.

The pull bearers are Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, Gen. Joseph R. Johnston, Gen. Martin McMahon, Gen. Fitz John Porter, Gen. Wm. C. C. Smith, Gen. H. C. Kibbey and Col. E. H. Wright, of New York; General M. A. Abrams and S. L. M. Bartow. The burial will take place in the family plot at Trenton.

Governor Aldrich issued a proclamation requesting the people of New Jersey to devote the day of Gen. McClellan's funeral to appropriate religious services, and ordering the officers of the National Guard to wear badges of mourning for the occasion. All regimental and battalion colors will be furled and draped for the same period.

Arthur McClellan, brother of the general, arrived in Chicago Friday night with the widow until after the funeral. The determination of the family to have the funeral strictly of a civilian character is explained by the fact that just after Gen. Grant's death, Gen. McClellan, who was a friend of the general, was taken to the city. "It should be seen, I want no such parade. I wish to be buried quietly as a simple citizen of New Jersey. I would like, however, to have some of my old comrades present, but not as soldiers - simply as citizens."

As the body is taken to the church on Madison avenue it will repose for a short time in the residence of W. C. Prime, 28 East Twenty-third street, a few doors from the church. Friends will be permitted to view the remains there. Mrs. McClellan is still badly broken down with grief. She says only the most intimate friends, among these were sent messages of condolence. The day after the funeral, Mr. Tilden, Gen. Pryor, ex-Governor Hoffman, August Belmont and many others.

He said that the party that had been in power in the country, and in fact, no benefit could have been expected from the change in the administration brought about by James G. Blaine being stabbed in the back. Olden Time Spelling Schools.

[Inter Ocean.]
Spelling schools after the manner of the olden time are still to be found in this country. Already they have been organized in many places. It is very creditable to be a good speller, but very disgraceful to be a poor speller. It is well for young people to remember that many a young man has lost the chance of the best wife by failing to make a study of his spelling-book and dictionary when young. There is no place where bad spelling looks worse than in a love letter. A badly spelled love letter, written by either a young lady or gentleman, will spoil a hundred romantic tales told by moonlight, and lock the whole case up in captivity.

For Frequent Reference.
[Inter Ocean.]
President White in his farewell address to students of Cornell university dropped the name of the young man of every college should study in their lists for frequent reference. He said: "Young gentlemen, do not try to be smart, but do everything that comes to your lot in a faithful and satisfactory manner."

WHITE STOCKING BILLY.

The Last of one of Janesville's Favorite Equines.

Some of his Peculiar Characteristics. More than a quarter of a century ago the inhabitants of that period will recall the appearance on our streets of a very slight legged little horse driven by Lyman Black, then head cutter in M. C. Smith's tailoring establishment. Black was proud of him, for he was a lively one for his time, and could hold his own with the best. In process of time he was sold to a lady as a riding horse. But the saddle was clearly not his forte; for his long legs was not graceful, and was only relieved by the snowy whiteness of his limbs, and the easy grace with which his rider kept her seat. Others tried to ride him, but with indifferent success, and after being ridden by a young circusman for some months, Billy was rehired of his saddle, which always fretted him, and resumed his work in harness, which was much more congenial. For many years he was daily on the street, the liveliest of the lively, ready for a brush with anybody. But Billy's life was not all sport. He toiled as well, and his frequent visits into the country around Janesville made him noteworthy. For ten years he served his master (for master he had by courtesy) and then he became the "family horse" trusty and true, permitting the children to harness and drive him anywhere and everywhere, but rarely allowing himself to be pressed into anything but a quiet pace, and when he thought he had been out long enough he would carefully but resolutely turn his head homeward and no amount of remonstrance on the part of the children could induce him to change his course.

For the last few years Billy had rarely been seen on the streets. Passers along Milwaukee avenue, during summer, have noticed him quietly grazing in a park connected with a stable, adjoining Dr. J. B. Whiting's residence, which is always open, into which he could go to escape the flies or the storms. In winter he had apartments, exclusively his own, ample and warm. For the last few months Billy has evidently failed. He rarely lay down because he found it hard to rise—still his health was good and he was the fattest horse of the premises. On Sunday morning last Billy was noticed lying down, a thing so unusual that his master called to him; Billy raised his head in recognition of the call and made a pitiful cry for help at the same time making an effort to regain his feet, but failed. He was never again able to rise, but he was kindly cared for until he gave up the struggle, and died, aged 35 years.

A Lucky Man

"A lucky man is rarer than a white crow," says Juvenal, and we think he knew. However, we have heard of a number of lucky men, and we propose to let their secret out. They were people broken down in health, suffering with liver, blood and skin diseases, eczema, dropsy, and consumption, and were almost dead. They were "Golden Medical Discoveries," the sovereign blood purifier, tonic and alterative of the age.

DEATH IN A LAUNDRY.

ENTIRE INSIDE OF THE BUILDING BLOWN OUT.

One Girl Salded to Death and Others Fearfully Injured—Railway Wrecks Caused by Floods in Virginia—The Daily Death Roll.

New York, Oct. 31.—A patent steam ironing-machine was put last Tuesday on the first floor of the laundry at 334 West Twenty-third street, W. A. B. Roberts owned the laundry and employed John Young, Jr., in the ironing-room. The essential part of the machine was a hollow cylinder of one-half inch wrought iron eight feet long and three feet in diameter. The ends of the cylinder were of heavy cast-iron, fastened to a flange within the cylinder. The cylinder was kept full of superheated steam, and as it revolved it ironed the clothes against a flat board on a raised platform on one side of the ironer and fed it with clothes.

Opposite to the ironer, a man named Granger, who received the ironed clothes, Maggie Bowers folded the clothes at a table opposite that of the cylinder which was away from the ironer. Maggie Bowers, a young girl, was also in the room.

Just after 9 o'clock the head of the cylinder blew out with a tremendous crash. Every window in the place was blown out, and steam filled the room. The girls near the ironer cried out with pain. Proprietor Roberts grouped his way to where Maggie Bowers lay crying for help. Maggie was lying on the floor, her head under the cylinder, and her body under the ironer. She was dead.

John O'Callow, the engineer, who was down in the basement at the time of the explosion, was knocked off his feet. As soon as he was able to stand up he ran to the boiler and shut off the steam. There was a great crowd outside and ambulance men came.

Maggie Bowers had been taken into Mrs. Oddy's house across the street, and attended by Dr. Miller and Father Maher, of St. Columba's church. Her face was badly bruised, and she was in a dangerous condition.

The doctors said they never saw a patient suffer so much. They had great difficulty in getting her hot clothes off her, and laying her out on a wrapping her in sheets, and laying her out on a stretcher to go to the New York hospital. She was put on a water-bed, and her mother came to see her. She died at 5 p. m. She was 15 years old.

Kate Murphy, Mary Harlick, Mamie Calahan, Edith Granger were all terribly shocked. They were taken to the Roosevelt hospital, where they lie in a dangerous condition. The explosion blew out the entire inside of the laundry. It appeared on examination that the head of the cylinder, which broke to fragments, was fastened on with screws, which merely entered the flange from half to three-quarters of an inch, instead of penetrating it.

Heavy and Misadventurous Rain. Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 31.—New reached here early this morning of the terrible work of the storm which prevailed throughout this section Thursday
